January 26:

Overcoming the Most Common Obstacles to Inclusion

This presentation will focus on the most common reasons that cause individuals to believe that more restrictive settings are needed in order for students with disabilities to learn.

Each issue raised will include ways that each of us, regardless of job title, can be part of working towards solutions. Presentation will focus on access and opportunity for ALL learners within the context of general education programs.

Kristin Enriquez

With a 25+ year career as a Teacher, Educational Administrator, and Educational Consultant, Kristin Enriquez, M.A. still loves working with children and their teams. She believes that creating a level playing field between parents and educators allows them to use the systems in place to empower progress in the student they are coming together to support.

With experiences working directly with children who learn differently, coaching parents to better understand how to navigate educational systems, and supporting increased capacity among educational professionals, Ms. Enriquez brings her experiences as an educator, school administrator, program author, and the parent of a child with Down syndrome who has been fully included throughout his school experience, to every interaction.
